Zagat says this unpretentious shop is "the place to go for the occasions when you need" kosher sweets.

Patrons praise the "wonderful kosher candy" as the house specialty that keeps them coming back.

According to the guide, Mazal moved to its current Flushing quarters in 2006, though the extensive all-kosher selection of grocery items and freshly baked pastries imported from Israel "has been around forever."

A lively soundtrack of Israeli music keeps you entertained while shopping.
